

Comment from Dennis Clifton

I have a 2008 Silverado 1500 that is under the recall of the airbags. It seems as though GM and Takata do not consider this to be much of a threat to the people who own these vehicles. GM's comment is that they consider these to be safe to drive.

Of course they do, they are not going to be in one when they explode. Obviously, there has been no issues with these exploding or that I have heard of. Personally I would prefer that GM provide replacement vehicles that have safe airbags and then they can stock pile these vehicles till they get the parts available and once they have the airbags replaced, then they can have a sale.
