

Ramonta Lee - Comments

Autonomous trucks are not what this country needs to progress when we have a failing infrastructure. There is no talks of training professional drivers for the future occupations that this technology will bring about. You have an entire force on the roads helping to stop trafficking of people how about also allowing us to report aggressive unsafe drivers with the use of our in-cab cameras so that unsafe driving around our trucks can be reduced as well as better educating the public about our trucks. Lastly, people with regular licenses drive RVs and tow large trailers yet no training or special license is required, they are unsafe. Before autonomous trucks becomes a viable option we have much educating and repairing of our infrastructure to do.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.