

Michael Lloyd - Comments

In today's world we are always trying to advance technology and introduce it into places that we think would be great, this isn't one of those places. I can't believe we are even considering automated trucks. Today there are more vehicles and pedestrians on the road than ever and to put a tractor trailer on the road that isn't operated by a human is such an unsafe act and very careless. The only reason to even consider such a crazy concept is because of profit for these corporations that are pushing this along at the speed of light. How many times has a computer failed us in our everyday life, phone calls get dropped, wifi signal gets lost and today we have more data breaches than ever, what's stopping hackers from hacking into these automated trucks. There is no safe zone for an automated truck. This isn't good for our highways and the public safety, we are not ready for this kind of technology on our roads.