

Joshua Silvers - Comments

When these technologies end up killing the motoring public, we must be allowed to sue not just the agencies that allowed it, but we must be allowed to sue agency heads personally also. We see the tesla technology fail miserably, and all the deaths so far from other self driving vehicles, and the facts are undeniable. The people who head the agencies that are opting to put people in danger for this ill advised testing on public roads should loose their exemption form being sued personally for the bad decisions that are moving this testing forward and putting the general motoring public in danger. These are our families that will be killed in order to "test" this technology that is not near safe at all.