

Jonathan Ward - Comments

No commercial vehicle should be allowed to transport any materials on a public road without a DOT-certified human driver present inside of the cabin. As a professional driver with over 20 years of experience, I know that no matter how well a vehicle may have been built, systems will always fail. A human driver will be the last line of defense in preventing a fatal situation from occurring.