

James Zuber - Comments

Stop step back take a deep breath and think about the consequences. First off this new technology is manufactured and designed by humans and is not perfect and will fail. Technology is a good thing when it assists you in your job and makes it easier but a very bad thing when it takes your job. Let me explain. If you take 900000 trucking jobs those 900000 jobs will hurt the economy but think of all the people who rely on the jobs you're killing. Truckstops restaurants parts men salesman men small business owners repair shops tax accountants who will pay all the taxes. Road use employee income federal stat and local who will pay all those taxes. A very large segment of society with no job no money to purchase anything. It will crash our economy and destroy our country as we know it. There's only one thing that can make a difference. Restore free market system. And education is key to saving lives on our roadways no more subsidies for mega carriers. For anyone run it like a business. Stop self insurance and subsidising make the mega carriers pay their fair share. Who will be responsible for death and destruction caused by this new technology