

Chris Garcia - Comments

I do not believe automated commercial motor vehicles are ready for highways any time soon. The technology for fully autonomous vehicles is still very new and it needs more time to develop. I do believe, however, that Level 4 operations that involve humans would be better in that it can avoid accidents but humans should be able to take control at any time.