I do not feel it a smart move at all just one solar flair or cell tower or satellite goes down and we all have problems. Not a wise idea I feel it's hard enough with short time over the road driver just out of school. I have been driving over 30 years and I learn something everyday Some time you get a gut feeling about up ahead on the road a computer driven truck does not have that ability if we approve this I am quitting driving over the road will not be safe. Are systems are not ready for doing this it's a bad idea plain and simple
