Sir or Ma'am:

I can understand including rear view cameras in addition to the mirrors, as the mirrors themselves could provide room to house cameras. And certainly, on their own, they can help save space. However, cameras can easily become dirty, would require more rigorous maintenance, and are more expensive than mirrors to replace. There is also the concern that the video wiring could easily be damaged, and require people to replace said wiring. It's not a good idea for your safety feature to go haywire while you are driving.

In short, as a replacement for mirrors, it's not safe. As an addition to mirrors, at least you have the mirror to fall back on in an emergency.

Thank You
