

Comment from Jared Rivera

There is no driver or safety demand to replace mirrors with cameras. This will result in higher purchase and replacement costs with no discernible benefit. In turn, that will negatively affect the ability of a large number of US workers to afford reliable, and recent autos to travel to their place of employment.

There has not been a single study that definitely proves that this will make automobiles demonstrably safer.

Please do NOT allow automakers to manufacture vehicles that are both more expensive and less safe.