

Comment from Alex Rodriguez

I believe camera systems should be allowed if they meet some minimum standards. The image should be no less than HD resolution, but can be higher. The field of view should be similar, preferably wider, than that of a regular mirror. The display is not less than 5 inches diagonal when you have a one to one mirror to monitor replacement. It is acceptable to have one wide display, minimum of 10 inches wide and it must show the same field of view as you would get from the regular 3 mirror complement. The displays should always be on. The displays should be dimmable. The camera must show cars on the side that are behind the leading edge of the front door.