

Comment from Craig Cohen

Hoping regulators would consider approval of advanced lighting and high beam technology. Being able to enable auto lighting technology that exists on my vehicle, and currently allowed in Europe, would give greater visibility for the driver, more reliable visibility for incoming traffic, and increased safety overall for night driving. This has recently become of specific concern as my son has started driving and I see the challenges with managing lights and incoming lights during night driving. Any advances in reviewing new technology here would be greatly appreciated.