

Anonymous Anonymous - Comments

I hope that the NHTSA is smart enough to see past a corporate shill, the IIHS, posing as a representative of the public interest. The IIHS and their corporate masters in the insurance industry have one goal, to maximize profits for their shareholders. Levying surcharges against safe drivers accused of technical speeding violations is a wildly profitable state-sponsored racket. Suppression and obfuscation of reasonable speed limits, statistical fabrications, biased research, and fear-mongering about the dangers of "speeding" and "speeders" are the modus operandi of these propagandists. Their goals are simple: unreasonable speed limits that turn safe and prudent motorists into criminals, elimination of due process for the accused, and oppressive enforcement. I hope you will bear in mind that you serve the public, not private interests.