

Comment from Brian Hammer

As long as Camera-Based Rear Visibility Systems provide equivalent rear view as mirrors I see no reason why they shouldn't be allowed. Since replacing mirrors with cameras can make vehicles more aerodynamic and thus more fuel efficient, I think it's worthwhile to research whether a camera-based rear visibility system can be an effective replacement for mirrors.