

Comment from Noa Banayan

On question 5: 5. Do you believe that there are international bodies or organizations (at any level) that the Department should be working with to develop standards or best practices for potential application to non-traditional and emerging transportation technologies in the United States?

From B2V: It is recommend that the Department should continue to work with SAE related to standards and best practices. B2V also recommends that working with consumer technology organizations, like the Consumer Technology Association (CTA) is important as mobile phones may be used in the transmission of sensor data or safety messages to ITS infrastructure.