

Comment from Anonymous Anonymous

I agree that VW Group of America's noncompliance with standards for TPMS is inconsequential in comparison to when the parent company rigged millions of diesel vehicles to activate emissions controls only during emissions testing.

Given VW's willingness to damage the environment and people's health to increase profits, there is no way that I would ever buy one of their cars. So the tire pressure issue won't affect me -- in other words it's inconsequential.

Thanks and have a great day. By the way, when you get a chance check out a Tesla Model 3 or Model Y. Last year I drove my Model 3 to the Grand Canyon, including a stretch of 260 miles between charging stations. Not sure if the VW ID.4 could handle this, but someone else will need to try it.