

Comment from Anonymous

I really liked how the agency approached setting a framework from the functionalities of ADS. In order to successfully set rules and policies for a newly emerging technology, a deep understanding of its functionalities is indeed required. This style of approach should be encouraged in the future, as ADS is only one of the many technologies that are coming up fast. Therefore, it is extremely important to work closely with the scientists and developers and listen to their suggestions, for they are the ones most knowledgeable in their respective area of development. Thank you!