Hello, I'm writing in support of the concept of vehicle side mirrors being allowed to be replaced by CMSs. As a driver of a Model 3, I find the CMSs superior in any lighting condition, and even more reliable than the antiquated side mirrors, which have a higher drag coefficient by nature. I live on a relatively narrow street, and over the last 11 years I've lived here, I've had my left side mirror knocked off three times. Ultimately, I had to resort to pulling my mirror in every time I park. Please consider the advantages of this new concept, it really works.
