

Comment from Daniel Irvin

Re: Docket 2020-0106

I believe NHTSA had been derelict in its duty to protect the safety and welfare of drivers on our public roads. NTSB has been clear that false claims by Tesla designed sell its software, lead drivers to rely on the system as if it were a true “full self driving” system and are making roads unsafe. Reckless implementation of technology that does not meet basic safety standards is not progress. By allowing a Chester to endanger the public you are impeding progress. These proposed rules are inadequate to the task. Plenty of diligent companies are making real progress in this area and they effort needs to be protected from charlatans that will undermine confidence in both the potential for real autonomy and govt’s ability to regulate it.