I am in favor of cameras supplementing and even replacing rear-view mirrors. I currently drive a 2017 Chevy Bolt which allows the rear-view windshield mirror to display a camera image. I find the camera image just as easy to use as the mirror image, and it has the benefit of not being blocked by loads in the back seat that would obscure what the mirror can pick up. The reduced drag of rear-view side cameras would be of great benefit for improved efficiency and lower fuel consumption.
