

Comment from Ruben Dorado

Regulating the speed so low is just going to worsen the traffic jams around big cities , I think trucks should be able to follow the traffic speeds with a significant amount of buffer zone , it's not the speed that kills , it's the following distance , reaction time , the closer they drive the worse it gets , You should regulate the amount of space between trucks and cars , not their speeds , also a truck needs that speed to climb the next hill without losing momentum, imagine being those cars waiting for a single truck to climb those hills , As an experienced truck driver I can tell you , remove the possibility of texting while driving in all vehicles and you will see those fatalities reduced drastically, God Bless America! Atte: Reuben Dorado , God's Fighter