This is a terrible idea. Nevermind being locked out of your vehicle during emergencies, shootings, or other issues. or privacy/ constitutional concerns for that matter of which there are plenty. what happens when it becomes removable? like every other feature in a car. what happens when i malfunctions? or misregisters the smell from your clothes or a cleaned up spill as drunkenness. Can you even still DD when it detects your impaired friend in the seat next to you? the amount of failure points on a technology like this farrrr outway its benefits. messing with the lives of millions of people on a daily bases is not worth the handful of people who cant make good choices. whats more, what happens when it doesnt detect someones drunkenness? whose liable if they hurt someone? the state? the auto-manufacturer? it surely cant be the driver because your ignition lock just told them they could drive. Stop invading our lives and do away with terrible laws like this. Just enforce the laws we already have properly.
